Dianne's Organic Gardening Tip

Winter is just around the corner. If you haven't thought about protecting your tender plants, now is the time to supply yourself with freeze cloth.

Newly planted citrus will need protection. Lime trees are not tolerant of the cold and will suffer damage if the temperature should drop to below 50 degrees for several days in a row. If growing in a pot you can pull them indoors.

REMEMBER: foliar spray with "Super Seaweed" all plants, this will help protect them from the cold. Seaweed is a natural plant hormone which enhances the plant's cell walls during excessive heat or cold. Spray all plants once a week for a healthy stress free garden.

Bare Root on the Way

We will receive a large shipment of bare root Blackberries and Strawberries. Blackberries are very healthy 2 year bare root plants. Also Southern Highbush Blueberries, 3 varieties.

Bare Root Fruit Tree for January
